The next part is a self-reflection of the group project. Use the rubric to answer questions 1&2:

1. Grade your own project for the “Required elements for the website” category on the rubric. (Assign your point value between 0 & 10). Explain your rational as you see fit.

A full ten points should be awarded for this section of the rubric as all points were covered in a clean, concise, and professional manner. Collectively, the appearance of the website demonstrates the delivery of topics in a cohesive manner with the material presented following the suggested format.

2. Grade your own project for the “Statistical Concepts” category on the rubric. (Assign your point value between 0 & 15). Explain your rational as you see fit.

A full score of 15 points should be awarded for my section, Descriptive Statistics. The concepts were well written without grammatical errors. The SPSS videos detail the concepts covered in a succinct manner delivering a visual representation of the written text.

3. Explain any comments, concerns, or issues that you experienced with this project.

Throughout this assignment, I experienced high points and lows. Working within the group, my partners provided opportunities to learn and demonstrate my understanding of the concepts we covered in our project. The team worked to support each member, helping to ensure that we were demonstrating information appropriately.
